

Elspeth Pearson Award

INFORMATION AND ELIGIBILITY CRITERIA

Introduction

Elspeth Pearson (1926-2015) was a member of the first cohort of occupational therapists to be trained in Australia. She became best known for her work as an occupational therapist in psychiatry, working as Chief OT at Larundel Psychiatric, based in Bundoora, which was one of the largest in-patient psychiatric hospitals in Victoria. During her 25 years at the hospital she developed industrial therapy programs, which provided long stay in-patients with the opportunity to not only be engaged in a work environment, but to participate in social interactions and practice money skills. She was also actively involved in assisting in the transition of long stay patients in mental health institutional care into the community and was one of the first to employ an art therapist in the early 1970s. In the mid-1960s Elspeth took up a secondment to Hong Kong at the request of the Victorian government, where the government was seeking the services of an experienced therapist to assist them in developing its psychiatric services. Elspeth was also one of the first awardees for the Victorian Public Service Award for her contribution to psychiatric services.

In recognition of her dedication and contribution to her profession, the Pearson family and Occupational Therapy Australia have established an award fund to enable newly qualified occupational therapists and senior (final year) university students to broaden their education or experience within the profession.

Award Details

The Elspeth Pearson Award will enable successful applicants to advance their skills and expertise through access to professional development opportunities. It is to be targeted toward occupational therapists within their first three years of experience looking to establish a defined career path and/or to final year students seeking practical or academic experience in a specific discipline of occupational therapy.

Professional development opportunities can include but are not limited to:

Attending a course/workshop, within Australia or overseas, that would enhance knowledge or practice skills in a particular field of occupational therapy.

Visiting specialised facilities, within Australia or overseas, recognized for best practice in service delivery

Undertaking a particular experience at undergraduate or masters pre-entry level which is not routinely offered and adds value to the student and their future professional practice.
