Occupational Therapy Australia

No OTs, No NDIS

Every day across Australia, people with disability are missing out on essential services as NDIS reforms limit access to qualified occupational therapists.

No OTs, No NDIS is a national campaign from Occupational Therapy Australia calling for urgent action to protect access to essential occupational therapy services and support a sustainable OT workforce within the NDIS.

Ongoing reforms and chronic underfunding are forcing occupational therapists to withdraw from the scheme, affecting thousands of participants across Australia.

When OTs are forced out of the scheme, participants pay the price.

The NDIS cannot function without a strong, supported OT workforce.
